WE ARE ALL MIGRATING TOGETHER

The 47 bus travels 10 miles one way, making it the longest bus route in Philadelphia County, carrying approximately 17,000 riders each day. That's a lot of missed connections.

47 Stories focuses on the 47 bus, a route that runs from north to south, connecting diverse communities along the way. This project reimagines the 47 bus as a vehicle for introducing passengers to Philadelphia. Images on the bus show places that are important to members of communities who live and work along the route, while quotations reveal what interviewees love and value about our city. The bus brings the voices, stories, and experiences of Philadelphians together, creating a space for reflection on our shared journeys.

"This corridor is very vibrant and diverse. Originally it was called Koreatown in the 80s, because of the Korean immigrants who came and opened businesses. We have [library] materials in 6 languages. The kids are our lifeline because none of our staff are bilingual. We have a lot of Haitian Creole speakers."

NORTH PHILLY

"I really hope that people that ride the bus will explore more, instead of just taking their bus from their job to the house, maybe they'll keep going a little further...." "The 'wawa, el bus es algo universal, en México lo llaman el combi...." "It's a different way to be with people. Everybody is doing the same thing for different reasons..."

CENTER CITY

"Whenever I come back from the Gallery, you always pass the Edgar Allan Poe House, I look out the window and get really excited, and I want to tell people, there was this poet, and he used to live here. He was really messed up, but really good."

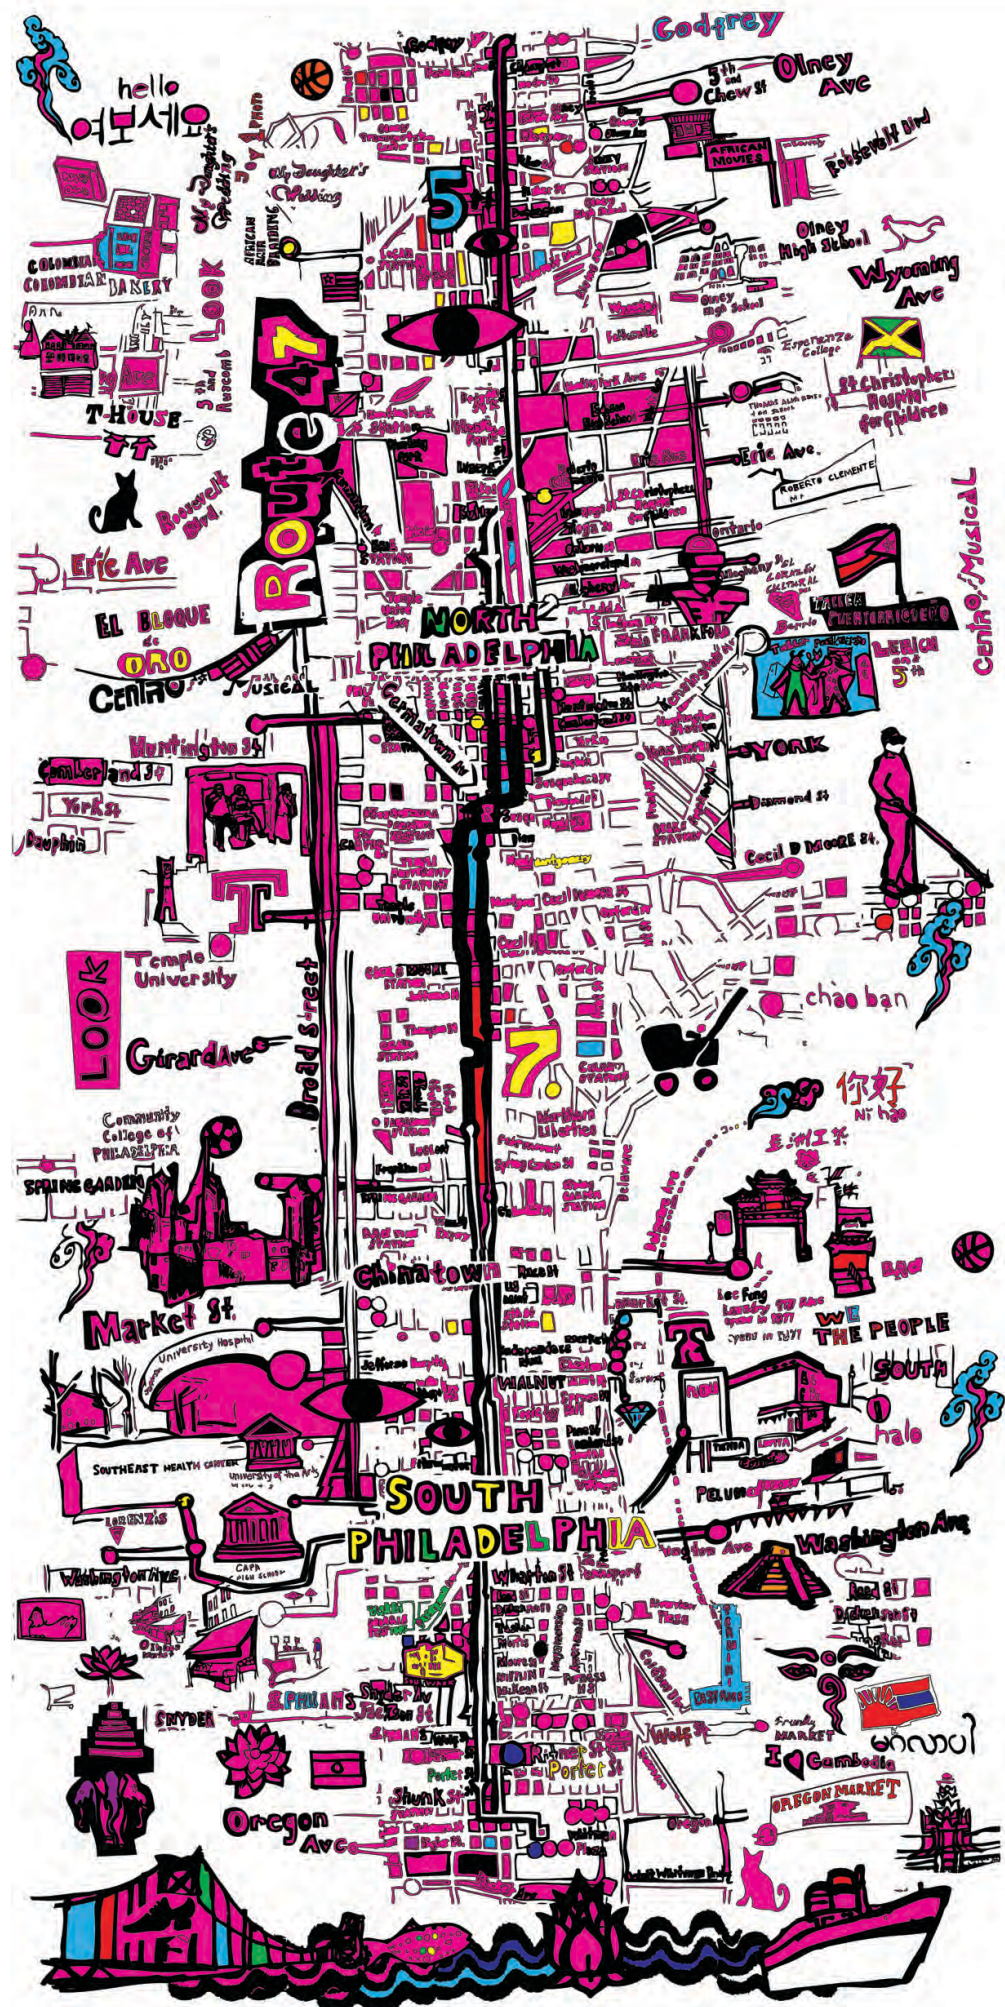

SOUTH PHILLY

"In South Philly, the Burmese community represents 4 main ethnic groups, Karen, Chin, Kachin, and Rakhine. For most refugee families, even if they want to go back, it would be difficult, it's not the money, they have left everything, and decided to leave, they have started a new life here."
